Your friend from India has asked you to help her with an e-mail she is sending to her school principal complaining about her school. You can see the first version of her e-mail below. Write a short text in which you give her some advice about how to make it more formal. Use examples from the e-mail.

Hi there

I am sick of the lack of after-school activities and school trips. Other schools get to do tonnes of exciting sports and go to loads of exciting places, but not us, no way. The last time we did anything was when we went to the local glass museum: boring!!! There are no sporting activities either, no school teams that compete in tournaments, no cheerleaders, no nothing for us kids to look forward to!!!

Here are some suggestions, and I suggest you take them seriously, or else! We would like a trip, on a luxury bus, to somewhere exciting, like the National Gallery of Modern Art in Mumbai or the Nehru Planetarium. We're also desperate to put a girls' basketball team together. We could hook up with the local basketball team, Nagpada Girls and get them on board.

Pls pls pls think about this!!!! We need something to get us fired up about school. It's just been so booring lately!

OUT.
